Williamsburg Orthodontics Brings Smiles to Dream Catchers

WILLIAMSBURG, Virginia – Therapy horse Bo is grinning ear-to-ear thanks to the generosity of Williamsburg Orthodontics. Long a supporter of Dream Catchers at the Cori Sikich Therapeutic Riding Center, the community-oriented practice that's well-known for its kindness initiatives has renewed its sponsorship of Bo.

Williamsburg Orthodontics has been putting smiles on faces since 1984, however, Bo is their first four-legged patient. While the 1000 lbs. therapy horse may not be getting braces, the orthodontic practice is giving him a reason to show off his pearly whites.

Their sponsorship gift underwrites the feed, hay, supplements, some tack, daily care, farrier fees and veterinarian wellness plan for one of the Dream Catchers' most popular horses. Williamsburg Orthodontics' logo is featured on Bo's saddle pad and halter. He dons his logoed gear while participating in equine-assisted activities with the nonprofit's participants as well as when he travels offsite for demonstrations and media appearances.

Practice founder Peter D. Wendell, DDS, shown here, and his partners Patti Ong Eppright, DDS and Matthew L. Eppright, DDS, believe in Dream Catchers' highly effective equine assisted activities provided to regional children and adults with special needs. Located at 4097-A Ironbound Rd., Williamsburg Orthodontics is active in spreading kindness throughout Greater Williamsburg. It's known for sponsoring school art projects, participating in the Williamsburg Kindness Rocks creative initiative and for its popular photo booth fun at local school and youth functions.

"We are thrilled that Williamsburg Orthodontics sees the smiles therapy horse Bo puts on participant's faces through our Dream Catchers program and we're honored they continue to support us," says Janet Mayberry, executive director of Dream Catchers.
